

ABSTRACT

Disclosed is band-gap circuit that overcomes the deficiencies of conventional band-gap circuits by compensating for high order temperature effects. The invention employs a resistor of high temperature sensitivity in parallel with a resistor having a low temperature sensitivity in the collector circuit of the transistors to counter inherent higher order temperature effects found in prior art circuits. Furthermore, the invention has a reduced sensitivity to the variables within manufacturing of integrated semiconductor devices.